

I am opposed to a revision of the media ownership rules in effect since the 1930's. Limiting the percentage of ownership in a given market ensures our communities have varied points of view, so vital to the democratic process in the United States. Although we have taken this for granted all these years, I can't think what the country would be like without this protection of our airwaves. The airwaves are owned by the People, not by a select few mega-corporations who only seek to make their bottomline look good.
